Joseph BELLINO (R-Monroe). For one, unions weren't convinced he's on their side by his no vote on the prevailing wage repeal. And other Democrats have done well in this blue-collar district that leans only slight to the R side. Bellino held his own, 56 to 44 percent.

That flips the seat now held by Rep. Laura Cox (R-Livonia). MIRS Analysis (November 6, 2018): While votes were still being counted at 5 a.m. it appears that Democrat Laurie POHUTSKY won by 92 votes, despite the fact she was accused by the GOP of wanting to pay reparations for manifest destiny and aiming to end free enterprise. 		expected. MIRS Analysis (November 6, 2018): Democrat Matt KOLESZAR won this Plymouth district, dumping out incumbent Rep. Jeff NOBLE (R-Plymouth) in a district that trends Republican. Nonetheless, Koleszar's background as a public-school teacher gave him a position from which to make an issue of the GOP's coziness with Betsy DeVOS. And the best the Republicans could come up with against him was a claim he wanted to end free enterprise. At 5 a.m., and with 19 precincts in Wayne County still outstanding, Koleszar was winning 53 percent to 47 percent.

It is the third time Democrats have spent big trying to defeat Mr. Iden and come up a little short. MIRS Analysis (November 6, 2018): This may well have been the state's most expensive House contest this year. Brandt IDEN (R-Oshtemo Twp.) was the highest raising Republican in the same time period, 79,845. Then caucus PACs put additional money behind these two, Republicans spending $263,454 on behalf of Iden and Dems putting $73,720 behind Griffin.
